

Your new greenslip

A better deal for children

Children are unpredictable. They move quickly without thinking of potential risks and can be injured in car accidents with the driver having no chance of avoiding a collision.

The current greenslip scheme is fault based. Basically, this means that to make a claim, a child must prove they were injured by the fault of the driver. If the driver is not at fault, the parents are left to pay for all treatment, care and rehabilitation costs. If a child is catastrophically injured this can last the rest of their life.

From October 1, the greenslip scheme will be expanded to provide that all children injured in motor accidents will have their expenses met in full for all necessary treatment, rehabilitation and care needed for their recovery.

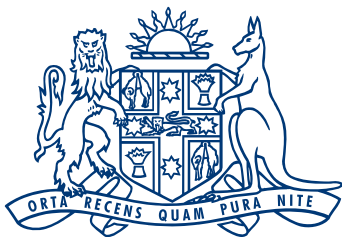

A small price to pay

From 1 October 2006, greenslip prices will increase slightly to cover the cost of this special children's benefit. Your greenslip will also show a separate levy which covers all ambulance and hospital costs for all motor vehicle accidents (previously included in the premium) and for treatment, care and support for children with very serious injuries who need life time assistance.
